RE: Just-completed statewide survey shows Jamie Davis in a tied race with Republican Julia Letlow

Hart Research Associates conducted a statewide survey between October 28 and 29, 2026, among 502 likely Louisiana voters via landline, cell phone, and text-to-web. The survey was representative of the November 2026 electorate by key demographic, geographic, and partisan factors (the 2024 presidential recalled vote was Trump 58%, Harris 38%), and has a margin of error of $\pm 4.5\%$.

Our survey shows that Jamie Davis is in a dead heat with Julia Letlow in the initial trial heat, despite Letlow's name recognition advantage, with Mr. Davis holding a large lead among the key bloc of Independent voters:

The Democratic surge in recent polls, including in red states like Kansas and South Carolina, is due largely to the dissatisfaction with Donald Trump and the Republican majority, and Louisiana is NO different. Trump's favorability rating (48%) is below a majority in a state he won two short years ago with 60% of the vote, and in fact, Trump's VERY negative rating (40%) is higher than his VERY positive rating (33%).

Jamie remains incredibly well-positioned to pull ahead on Election Day if he is able to close the name recognition gap with his opponent--77% recognize Letlow, 52% recognize Davis. In fact, Jamie has a significant double-digit lead among the 47% of the electorate that knows BOTH Davis and Letlow, which affirms the necessary of (A) getting out the vote and (B) increasing Jamie's name recognition by Tuesday.
